Death in Philadelphia of a Former Resident.

Mr. John E. Lane, who died in Philadelphia a few days ago, was well known here in Richmond, where he formerly resided. Seven or eight years ago he conducted the saloon and restaurant business on Broad street near Seventh. He was a member of the Young Guard for a time during the war. Mr. Lane was one of the originators of the movement which culminated in the organization of R. E. Lee Camp, Confederate Veterans. The first meeting was held at his house, and he was one of the first officers of the Camp under Colonel Charles U. Williams, commander. He was especially active in the great Lee Camp Fair, and returned to Philadelphia in the early part of 1885. ore then dwelt at length upon the attributes of the Saviour. The young men were somewhat under the influence of liquor at the time the offence was committed, They were fined $10 and costs each. A. Tabb, S. W. Travers, H. Wallerstein, and L. C. Younger, directors.

Mr. H. E. Holms, on behalf of the Committee on Manufactures, in the absence of the Chairman, reported to the board that the maps of Richmond and vicinity had been completed at a cost to the Chamber of about $700 for the issue of 3,090.

Mr. H. A. Tabb suggested that some of the maps should be properly backed and mounted, which question was referred to the Committee on Manufactures for their decision.

Louis Booker (colored), the negro whose arrest Wednesday was reported in the Disparcit, was charged with setting fire to, and attempting to burn the unoccupied dwelling-house of Mrs. M. T. Gross. There was no evidence against the accused except that he had been seen on the lot a short while before the fire. Mrs. Gross, who employed the prisoner in her store, testified that she had sent him to the house herself and that his character was good. Booker was accordingly discharged. Patrick Dailey was sent to jail for ninety days for stealing and carrying away three pair of pants, valued at $3.75, the property of Dora Senator.

John Ryan and Charles Greene, the two white men arrested a few days ago, on Mr. S. W. Travers, chairman of the Committee on Inland Trade, reported the satisfactory explanation and adjustment of several questions relating to traffic over the Atlantic-Coast Line, the Norfolk and Western, and the Richmond and Danville railroads, which had been brought to the attention of the several sub-committees for those lines. He also stated to the board, as has been mentioned already in the Brash as the committees of the second sub-committees for these lines. those lines. He also stated to the board, as has been mentioned already in the Disparce, that Colonel Purcell and he had visited Petersburg on Tuesday last and arranged for a conference between a committee of the Petersburg Chamber of Commerce and a committee of the Richmond Chamber to be held at an early date in Richmond, for the purpose of considering what steps could, be taken to promote the construction of the Virginia and Carolina railroad.

Boy Confederates.

Boy Confederates.
[Atlanta Constitution.]
The RICHMOND DISPATOR is publishing a series of letters about the boy soldiers of the Confederacy with the the design of ascertaining, if possible, who was the youngest soldier in the Confederate army.
Many of the letters give the names of boys who at the age of fiteen took up arms and fought through the whole war. The youngest on record up to date is an unenlisted boy ramed Penn. Young Penn was from New Orleans. During the war he was visiting a relative on the Chickahominy and General J. E. B. Stuart carried him to camp. At the battle of Gaines's Mill Major W. Roy Mason found the little fellow in a pine thicket with a dead soldier's musket firing away vigorously at the Federals. Of course the officer at once sent the boy to a place of safety.

As young Penn was not in the army he cannot be put forward as the youngest Confederate, but his case illustrates the spirit of southern boys during the early sixties.

Our boy soldiers made a splendid record.

Our boy soldiers made a splendid record. Our boy soldiers made a splendid record.
Some of them, wearing the scars of battle on their still youthful faces, are among the leaders of the new South to-day. As a rule, the Confederate veteran is equal to any duty or emergency, and is as energetic in peace as in war.
